Out Of

Salary While

Employers must report employees' missed hours and wages on the Annual Leave Report

- PERA uses the report to calculate cost estimates for the employees to make a leave purchase
- All leave salary calculations are determined
 - On a pay period by pay period basis
 - Based on the employee's average gross earnings during the prior six months of employment

PTO is eligible when:

- An employee exhausts their PTO bank in a pay period
- If taken at a reduced rate, PTO is eligible when it:
 - Covers 100% of a non-medical leave
 - Covers at least 50% of a medical leave
 - Brings the salary up to 100% when used during a Workers' Comp leave or medical MPL

PTO is ineligible when all available PTO is not used in a pay period and:

- 1) It is not a Workers' Comp leave or a medical MPL leave
- 2) The PTO covers less than
 - 100% of a non-medical leave
 - 50% of a medical leave

Include as missed wages/hours on the Annual Leave Report

Third Party Payments

Include as missed wages/hours on the *Annual Leave Report

Sam takes an eight-week medical leave. Sam earns $15/hour and works 60 hours/pay period = $900 each pay period.

- Sam uses 20 PTO hours each pay period = $300/pay period
- $300 is less than 50% of $900; pay is ineligible for the first three pay periods of the leave
 - Report the first three pay periods as missed hours (60 hours x 3 pay periods = 180 hours)

On the fourth pay period, Sam uses her last 20 hours of PTO.

- Since Sam is exhausting her PTO, the pay is eligible
- Report contributions on the fourth pay period salary
- Report 40 unpaid hours on the Annual Leave Report

Sam takes an eight-week medical leave. Sam earns $15/hour and works 60 hours/pay period = $900/pay period

- Sam uses 40 PTO hours each pay period = $600
- Sam has 20 unpaid hours each pay period
- $600 is more than 50% of $900; pay is eligible
- Only report the unpaid hours
(20 unpaid hours x 4 pay periods = 80 hours)

Sam takes an eight-week non-medical leave.

Sam earns $15/hour and works 60 hours/pay period = $900 each pay period.

- Sam uses 40 PTO hours each pay period = $600
- $600 is less than 100% of $900; pay is ineligible for the first three pay periods of the leave
 - No contributions to report
 - On the leave report: include all as missed hours/pay (60 hours x 3 pay periods = 180 hours)

On the fourth pay period, Sam uses her last 40 hours of PTO.

- Since Sam is exhausting her PTO, the pay is eligible
- Report contributions on the fourth pay period salary
- Report 20 unpaid hours on the Annual Leave Report

Sam takes a six-week personal leave. Sam earns $15/hour and works 60 hours/pay period = $900 each pay period.

- Sam uses 120 PTO hours to fully cover first two paychecks:
 - Report contributions on 100% pay
 - Do not report on the Annual Leave Report
- Sam uses remaining 40 PTO hours to cover third paycheck; pay is eligible
 - Report contributions
 - On the leave report, only include the 20 missed hours/pay from the third pay period

- Sam earns $900 each pay period.
- While on leave, Workers' Comp covers 2/3 of Sam's salary each pay period
 - $$900 \times 2/3 = \600
- Sam uses PTO to cover the remaining $300 each pay period
 - The $300 is eligible
 - Report the $600 on the leave report

Don't report:
